A recent survey has shown that the number of people in the United Kingdom who do not intend to get internet access has risen. These people, who are known as "net refuseniks", make up ۴۴% of UK households, or ۱۱,۲ million people in total. The research also showed that more than ۷۰ percent of these people said that they were not interested in getting connected to the internet. This number has risen from just over ۵۰% in ۲۰۰۵, with most giving lack of computer skills as a reason for not getting internet access, though some also said it was because of the cost.

More and more people are getting broadband and high speed net is available almost everywhere in the UK, but there are still a significant number of people who refuse to take the first step. The

PARTB : Reading comprehension

The makers of a controversial computer game about bullying have decided to go ahead and launch it despite calls for it to be banned. In the game, players take on the role of a new student at a school and have to fight the bullies by punching them or hitting them with a baseball bat.

They have said that the game encourages violence. But the makers deny this and say that while there is violence in the game it is just an amusing look at school life moreover the violence in the game is directed against the bullies to protect pupils who are being bullied. The makers also say that players will learn to stand up to bullies.

A British politician, a former minister, has called for it to be banned as it might affect the way young people perceive violence. Anti-bullying charities have
